5 THINGS TO DO WHEN CONSIDERING DIVORCE

An easy guide to help you know where to start.

TEAM ZENIR

I'm John Zenir

Welcome

30 years ago I started my practice with one goal: helping people. Over the years I have solved many difficult cases and created many new beginnings for many people. I learned that people need solutions tailored to their particular circumstances because we are all different.

How I can Help You?

Our services cover different aspects in a person's life and are family centered.

Our team will find the best solutions and preview the different outcomes to help you make the best decision, providing you security and certainty for the future.

5 THINGS TO DO WHEN CONSIDERING DIVORCE

01

HOW MUCH YOU OWN AND OWE

Equitable distribution of assets when getting divorced is one of the aspects, and it includes assets and debts. This is why it is important that you are aware of your debts.

PROOF OF INCOME

02

You need to show the income of your spouse and yours. Pull copies of the most recent pay stubs or bank statements and your most recent income tax return.

03

REALISTIC COSTS OF LIVING

You need to know, realistically, what your costs of living will be after the divorce. This will influence how you negotiate your divorce settlement. You need to know what you will need financially in order to evaluate your settlement options.

BUILD YOUR CREDIT

04

If you share credit with your spouse, you might find that you don't have credit in your name. You want to make sure you build your credit so you can purchase a car or a home on your own post-divorce

05

CLOSE JOINT ACCOUNTS

Close all joint credit accounts. If you think your spouse may react badly to the divorce, be proactive. Pay off and close all shared accounts and open a new bank account under your name only. Transfer half of the funds from your shared account into your personal one.

FINAL THOUGHTS

Remember, always consult a lawyer so they can help you to see the big picture and you can take the steps with confidence. Each case has different variables which require a unique solution.

We help people to create new beginnings and have clarity and security for the future.
